. Topics and Speakers include:

- Joseph Hennecky a retired Forensic Investigator will provide a presentation and general overview of search techniques and tools that are free, open-source and/or internet accessible for conducting in-depth searches for social media related projects. The presentation is not all-inclusive but indicative of the techniques and tools that are readily available to the public. A case study is part of the presentation
- Tom Rohr a former Corporate Security Director will speak on the Value of conducting Security Risk Assessments that includes external Site Security, Interior Security, Building Security and the process to protect your high value assets and prevent major disruption of services. These assessments are used to evaluate the exposure of key assets, the related impact if compromised, and what corrective actions are recommended.
- Hank Kula is a member of the L-Tron Training and Education Team and works as Law Enforcement Support. He is a retired police sergeant with 26 years in law enforcement. A certified crime scene investigator, crash reconstructionist, and former journalist, Hank works as a police instructor with recruits, veteran officers, and supervisors. His instructional specialties are in crime scene management and investigation, photography, communications and public information.
- Moses Robinson a seasoned Rochester Police Department Officer will provide a presentation on Human Trafficking. There are an estimated one billion migrants globally, many of whom are at risk of being trafficked and exploited. Often impoverished and jobless, they are easy targets for those who abuse them in situations of modern-day slavery, part of a global business of forced labor that generates an estimated $150 billion in annual revenue.

Who should attend:

Law enforcement, public safety agencies, security personnel, school administration, loss prevention professionals, fraud/risk investigators, human resources, bank fraud investigators and government officials.
