

(Un)Spoken: A CELEBRATION of MOTHER LANGUAGE DAY

Join us as we celebrate Mother Language Day, a custom that began in Bangladesh in 1952 when university students protested for the recognition of their mother tongue, Bangla, as one of the two national languages of East Pakistan. Students, faculty and friends will share their mother languages and dialects through various forms of expression; poetry, song, spoken word, storytelling and more.

We will also discuss the importance of mother/indigenous languages.

Monday, March 5, 2018

11:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.

PRISM Multicultural Center, Building 1 - Room 108

Pizza and drinks will be provided.

Interested in sharing your mother language(s)?

Email cdima@monroecc.edu. Please include your name.

Group and individual sign-ups are welcomed. We also highly encourage participants with various dialects, creoles, pidgins, and accents to share as well!
