Note: Due to COVID-19 cancellations of in-person arts-related events, this week's Arts Week once again features virtual events by Rochester-area artists and authors.

Singer, songwriter and pianist Annie Wells will perform at the Virtual Little Café from 8 to 9 p.m. Friday, May 8. You can stream the concert on Wells' Facebook page: facebook.com/Annie-Wells-Musician. Wells has performed at the Little Café in person for a decade. This event is part of the Rochester venue's series of continuing weekly, free, entertainment by local musicians online during the COVID-19 pandemic. Wells will donate half of all virtual tips received during the performance to the Little and half to Lifespan of Greater Rochester.

The Rochester Museum and Science Center's Cumming Nature Center and the Naples Library will host a free book discussion about Peter Wohlleben's "The Hidden Life of Trees" at 11 a.m. Wednesday, May 6. This event is part of the museum's Online Eco-Book Club and Hike, which is typically held each month in person. Advanced registration is required via bit.ly/EcoBookClubandHike. All who register will be sent instructions via email on how to participate virtually.

Watch the readings of the award-winning scripts from Monroe Community College's annual student playwrighting competition at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 7, via Zoom. This year's winners of the 13th annual Sixth Act's One-Act Play contest are: Emily Newsome with "The Thing About War," Hana Oh with "A Bag of Jjinnpang," Ella Quinn-Marsh with "Still Asleep" and Misty Yarnall with "I'm Sorry, Carrie." The scripts will be read by student, faculty and community actors and directed by MCC professors. Registration is required for the virtual viewing any time before or during the event via <https://bit.ly/2y7iCtV> or find the link at facebook.com/WritersMCC.
