The Honors Option enables a student to receive honors credit for a 200-level course by providing an opportunity to engage in supplemental, honors-caliber research, projects, or performance to gain deeper knowledge or understanding of the subject. Faculty members may propose a course for HOC designation by sending the following to the Honors Institute:

- A Course Information Sheet for a standard section of the course
- A description of the research, projects, or performance required for HOC designation on this form.

Compared to work for a standard section, the work for the HOC section must present greater intellectual challenge; complete more steps in a process; exhibit more rigor in research; display significantly more creativity; or show deeper understanding of course-related theories, experiments, or practices.

Up to ten HOC proposals will be eligible for summer instructional development stipends for the summer 2018. We will announce instructional development stipends in June 2018.

We will give preference for summer development stipends to proposals that (a) maximize options for student choice; (b) are offered at the downtown campus; and (c) are offered online.
