

Dr. Jeanine Dingus-Eason

Dr. Dingus-Eason holds a Ph. D. in Curriculum and Instruction from University of Washington, Seattle and an M.S. in Education, Secondary English Education from the University of Rochester and a B.A. in English from the University of Rochester. Additionally, she has her teaching certification in Secondary English in the states of New York, Arizona, and Washington.

Jeanine is currently Associate Professor and Program Director of the Executive Leadership Ed. D. program at St. John Fisher College. She started her career as Instructor/Teacher at various educational institutions including the University of Rochester, Rochester City School District, Antioch University in Seattle, WA, and South Seattle Community College. She then worked as an Assistant Professor in the Department of Teaching and Curriculum at the University of Rochester before joining St. John Fisher College in her current position. Jeanine owns her own business, Empowered Qualitative Research Services, LLC. Additionally, she is a founding Board of Trustees President of the Rochester Career Mentoring Charter School.