TEXTBOOK NEWS

The Bookstore staff would like to thank you for your contributions to the great start of another semester. Working together, we all contribute to student success.

As everyone is aware, the textbook landscape has changed drastically in the last few semesters. E-books, web site access codes and software, DVDs, and other technological advances have changed how students receive and interact with teaching materials. The MCC Bookstore staff are constantly working and looking at new and different methods to supply the books and other items you, the faculty, need at the lowest possible prices, while giving all of our different students the formats they want. Besides the now traditional new and used textbooks, we have digital e-book versions of about 15 percent of our titles, with new ones added every semester.

Currently, we are researching some new technologies that will allow us to expand our used textbook offerings. These tools will help us find even more copies of used books to give our students an even better value for their educational dollar.

However, we can't do any of this without one very important ingredient: the faculty textbook adoption. With that knowledge, we can start searching our suppliers sooner for less expensive used copies. We can buy back copies from our current students, paying them the highest possible price and ensuring a lower selling price for the next student. Providing your textbook information as early as possible also allows us the time to work with you should one of your books be unavailable or have an edition change.

Or, should you wish to continue using an older edition, we will be happy to source copies on the used market for as long as they are available. Assuming it remains relevant, continuing to use an old edition is a great way to help lower students' textbook costs.

Thanks again for partnering with the Bookstore to have a positive impact on our students' educations.
