What does it mean to live in a world of difference? How do race, class, gender, sexuality, religion and ability impact our daily lives? This talk presents social research findings that speak to these issues. In addition, we will discuss ideas on how we can leverage our differences to live and work more effectively in our 21st century society.

Jonathan Iuzzini is Coordinator of MCC's Teaching & Creativity Center where he supports the work of full-time and adjunct faculty across the college. Trained in the field of social psychology, he has taught undergraduate courses and conducted research on issues of race, class, and gender. He was formally an Assistant Professor of Psychology, and an affiliate of the interdisciplinary program in Public Policy Studies at Hobart & William Smith Colleges.

This presentation will be thought provoking and will lend itself to much conversation and learning. Faculty and students are encouraged to come and engage in this important presentation.

Faculty if you plan on bringing your class, please R.S.V.P. to Shirley Batista-Provost (sprovost@monroecc.edu) or call 2544.
