

The Writing Center's College Hour Fall Workshop Series

Save these dates! The Writing Center will once again offer 3 College Hour Workshops at both the Brighton and Damon Campuses. These fun and informative sessions are open to all MCC students, faculty, and staff.

October 22, 2008: Commas: Why Should We Care?

Brighton - Room 9-128

Presenter: Carl Silvio, English/Philosophy

Damon - Room 4057

Presenter: Tokeya Graham, English/Philosophy

October 29, 2008: Myths and Mysteries of Punctuation: Quotation Marks, Dashes, and Ellipses

Brighton - Room 9-128

Presenter: Patrick Callan, English/Philosophy

Damon - Room 4057

Presenter: Matthew Fox, Transitional Studies

November 5, 2008: MLA, Works Cited Page

Brighton - Room 9-128

Presenter: Yulanda McKinney, English/Philosophy

Damon - Room 4057

Presenter: Tokeya Graham, English/Philosophy

Hope to see you there!

Mission Statement

The Writing Center's purpose is to guide students through the writing process and to provide support for faculty who assign written work. Tutoring sessions at the center are interactive discussions that encourage students to make informed decisions about their writing. The outcome of tutoring should be that the writer, not necessarily a specific piece of writing, will be changed. Tutors will not write, re-write, or line-edit any portion of a student's paper. Rather, they will assist with pre-writing, drafting, researching, revising, and editing. Most importantly, the Center aims to build students' confidence and improve their writing skills.