What is a cover letter?
A cover letter introduces you to the employer. An effective cover letter inspires an employer to read your resume. It demonstrates familiarity with the organization and emphasizes how your experience meets the needs of the organization. A cover letter should not re-state the information on your resume, but should show relationships between your skills and the position you are applying for.

Where do I begin?
To start your cover letter, begin by thinking about the following questions:
- What unique skills/abilities do you have that match the position requirements?
- Why should they interview/hire you?
- Why do you want to work for that particular employer?
- How can the employer benefit from your education, experience, etc.?

Does MCC offer cover letter assistance?

Cover Letter Tips
- Limit your cover letter to 3-4 brief paragraphs on a single page. Be succinct.
- Assess the employer’s needs and your skills. Then try to match them in the letter in a way that will appeal to the employer’s self-interest.
- Be specific when describing abilities, skills, honors and experience; use examples.
- Fill in the “blanks” your resume leaves out; your cover letter provides the employer with additional information of who you are and what you’ve done.
- Avoid using slang terms, jargon or exaggerating when writing your cover letter.
- A cover letter should indicate that you have a clear understanding of your career goals and job objectives (put some thought and research into this process).
- Margin your cover letter to the left, no indentations. Single-space your paragraphs.
- Leave three or four blank spaces in which to sign your name.
- Avoid using the pronoun “I” when beginning every sentence.
- Tailor a new cover letter for each employer, revise paragraphs for every letter.
- Make sure your envelope matches the same professional look of your cover letter and resume, avoid handwriting your envelope.
- Make a copy of the cover letter you send for your files.
Cover Letter Strategies

Addressing your cover letter
What if there is no contact name in the job advertisement? Who do you send your cover letter to? Find one! This will take some research, either via telephone or the Internet. You may want to call the target employer and get an actual name of a recipient for your cover letter. This will set you apart from most applicants. If you are unable to address your letter to a specific individual with his or her correct title, you may want to write “Dear Hiring Manager” or “Dear Selection Committee.”

Begin with a strong “hook”
Catch an employer's attention immediately by advertising your strengths and unique skills. Provide the reader with evidence as to why you are the best candidate for the position.

Example:
Dear Mr. Jones:
Having broken sales records and exceeded quotas in all my previous positions, and having recently completed my Associate’s degree in Business from Monroe Community College, I am an ideal candidate for the Sales Manager position at Paychex.

Emphasize how “you” will contribute to the organization/employer
Avoid using the pronouns “I,” “me,” and “my” consistently throughout your cover letter. It is a common mistake. Redirect the emphasis from yourself to the employer and tell them how they can benefit from “you.” Your letter should be employer centered, not self centered. Ask yourself “How can I be of service to this employer?”

Pronoun Overuse Example:
I am enclosing my resume for your review because I am very interested in obtaining a full-time position at Ace Financial to further my experience and my skills in banking. I am well qualified for this position. In addition to the strong quantitative and analytical skills I have developed as a business major and in my work experience, I have a proven ability to stay focused for long hours under pressure.

Revised Example:
I am applying for the Investment Banking Analyst position where my combination of economics training and high-tech experience will add value to your operations. Please consider the following: You will gain from my strong financial background, which includes a recent Associate in Science degree in Business Administration, coupled with experience researching and trading securities as an investment intern, resulting in returns of 200%.

Cover Letter Essentials
- Typed (use the same font as your resume)
- Written on the same paper that matches your resume and envelope
- Original (avoid mailing the same exact letter to multiple employers)
- Positive, professional, confident and enthusiastic sounding
- Error free (have someone proofread it)
- Brief and to the point (usually one page)
- Use an outline system to organize your thoughts before writing
- Reference job code or # if mentioned in the ad
